

Docuconsulting Teams with HP on Conversion Solution for Oracle Documaker and DocuMerge Customers

Docuconsulting, a premier professional services consulting firm specializing in document publishing solutions for the insurance industry, today announced conversion tools that will support migration services for companies that want to move their document publishing from Oracle Documaker and DocuMerge to HP Exstream, one of the market-leading customer communications management software platforms.

Atlanta, GA (PRWEB) September 8, 2010 — Docuconsulting, a premier professional services consulting firm specializing in document publishing solutions for the insurance industry, today announced conversion tools that will support migration services for companies that want to move their document publishing from Oracle Documaker and DocuMerge to HP Exstream, one of the market-leading customer communications management software platforms.

“With help from HP and enhancements made to our offerings, Docuconsulting is now ‘Exstream-enabled’ to provide a full range of services for HP Exstream, including new implementations, conversions and migrations,” said Richard Lee, Managing Partner for Docuconsulting.

Docuconsulting became an authorized HP Software Business Partner in the U.S. earlier this year and subsequently has been working closely with HP to provide support for HP Exstream customer communications management software via Docuconsulting’s middleware application, the Librarian. Docuconsulting’s Librarian has already facilitated dozens of successful migrations from older legacy solutions, and the recent collaboration with HP has produced an end-to-end migration strategy from DocuMerge to HP Exstream as well.

“There is a great deal of uncertainty in the market now as a result of recent mergers and acquisitions in the customer communications space,” continued Lee. “Combining the proven strength of the HP Exstream product with the extensive implementation and migration experience of Docuconsulting provides a certain win-win scenario for insurance companies.”

“For many insurance companies, upgrading their technology is essential to keeping up with demand and compliance requirements,” said Jerry Driscoll, director of financial services and insurance, Enterprise Software, HP. “With the introduction of these new utilities, we’ve made migrating current Documaker and DocuMerge applications to HP Exstream a reality, helping customers to reduce risk and lower total cost of ownership.”

About DocuConsulting

DocuConsulting is a premier professional services firm that specializes in document publishing for the insurance industry. DocuConsulting was founded by former Docucorp executives that saw a need to offer alternative professional services choices to fulfill the needs of the Insurance publishing space. Collectively, the executive DocuConsulting team has over 75 years of experience in the Insurance publishing domain, and has worked in close liaison with some of the largest P&C and Life Insurers in the world. This team, leveraging the talent of many former Docucorp and Skywire Software experts, is positioned to offer world-class consulting services to the Insurance market at very attractive prices.

Whether it be policy issuance, claims, correspondence or content management, DocuConsulting focuses on providing the world-class solutions with the most experienced and talented consultants in the industry. DocuConsulting is headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia. For more information, visit www.docuconsulting.com.