Stephen DeWitt

Senior Vice President and General Manager,
Personal Systems Group Americas

Hewlett-Packard Company

Stephen DeWitt leads HP's Personal Systems Group, Americas, which encompasses the U.S., Canada, and Latin America. In this role, Stephen manages the P&L for both the commercial and consumer business and is responsible for driving marketing, sales, and operations to achieve company revenue and profit goals, while ensuring a superior customer experience. In addition, Stephen oversees the Americas Solutions Partners Organization (Channel) for the corporation.

DeWitt joined HP in 2008 in his current position. Prior to joining HP, he served as the President and CEO of Azul Systems, an award-winning, privately-held, systems company which pioneered a new model for bringing processing power and memory to highly sophisticated, high-transactional applications deployed in enterprise markets. Stephen also served as the company's Chairman. During his more than 20 years in the technology industry, Stephen has served on the executive management teams of Symantec Corporation, Cisco Systems and Sun Microsystems as well as leading the development of multiple start-ups including both Azul Systems and Cobalt Networks. At Cobalt, Stephen served as the company's President and CEO and led the company from its earliest stages through rapid growth, an IPO, and subsequent merger with Sun Microsystems. Stephen has a dynamic reputation and a deep track record in building high performance sales, marketing, research and development, and global operations teams. He has served as a Director or Advisor for numerous early stage technology companies and is actively involved in many entrepreneurial forums and associations.

DeWitt holds a bachelor's degree in finance and economics from Babson College – Wellesley, Massachusetts and lives in the San Francisco bay area.
