

STEPHEN DEWITT

Senior Vice President and General Manager
Personal Solutions Group, Americas

HEWLETT-PACKARD COMPANY

Stephen DeWitt is senior vice president and general manager for the Personal Systems Group – Americas at HP, which encompasses the United States, Canada and Latin America. In this role, DeWitt manages profit and loss for both the commercial and consumer business and is responsible for driving marketing, sales and operations to achieve company revenue and profit goals, while ensuring a superior customer experience. In addition, he oversees the Americas Solutions Partners Organization (Channel) for the company.

DeWitt joined HP in 2008 in his current position. Previously, he served as chairman, chief executive officer and president of Azul Systems, an award-winning, privately held systems company that pioneered a new model for bringing processing power and memory to highly sophisticated, high-transactional applications deployed in enterprise markets.

During his more than 20 years in the technology industry, DeWitt has served on the executive management teams of Symantec Corporation, Cisco Systems and Sun Microsystems, as well as led the development of multiple start-ups including Azul Systems and Cobalt Networks. At Cobalt, DeWitt served as president and chief executive officer and led the company from its earliest stages through rapid growth, an initial public offering and its subsequent merger with Sun Microsystems.

DeWitt has a dynamic reputation and deep track record in building high-performance sales, marketing, research and development, and global operations teams. He has served as a director or advisor for numerous early-stage technology companies and is actively involved in many entrepreneurial forums and associations.

DeWitt holds a bachelor's degree in finance and economics from Babson College in Wellesley, Mass.
