Tom Reilly

Vice President and General Manager, Enterprise Security Products
Hewlett-Packard Company

Tom Reilly is vice president and general manager of Enterprise Security Products at HP. In this role, Reilly is responsible for the strategy, development and delivery of a portfolio of market-leading products including ArcSight, an HP company; Fortify, an HP company; and HP TippingPoint, which are designed to protect today's applications and IT infrastructures from sophisticated cyber threats.

Reilly previously served as president and chief executive officer of ArcSight Inc. Reilly also served as chief operations officer for ArcSight.

Prior to ArcSight, Reilly was vice president of Business Information Services for IBM, following the acquisition of Trigo Technologies Inc., a product information management software company. Reilly also served as chief executive officer of Trigo Technologies.