

Executive Biography

Tom Joyce

Vice President, Marketing, Strategy and Operations, Storage
Hewlett-Packard Company

Tom Joyce is vice president of Marketing for the Strategy and Operations organization within HP Storage. In this role, he led the integration effort for HP's acquisition of 3PAR. He also directed the integration planning for HP's acquisition of 3Com prior to his joining HP Storage.

Previously, Joyce was president and chief executive officer of Akorri, a start-up software company specializing in virtualization and storage management. Before this, he was vice president of Marketing, Product Management and Business Development at EMC. Joyce also has held several senior leadership positions at EMC Corporation, including vice president and general manager of IP Storage with responsibility for the EMC Celerra NAS business. He also was vice president of Marketing for EMC Storage Platforms, and worked in the Corporate Development group where he managed numerous acquisitions and investments.

Joyce earned an MBA from Bentley College and a Bachelor of Arts from Middlebury College.