

Executive Biography

Chris Griffith

Global Head of Product Management, HP Atalla
Enterprise Security Products
Hewlett-Packard Company

Chris Griffith is the global head of product management for HP Atalla, the company's payments and data security business.

Prior to his current position with HP Atalla, Griffith spent more than four years in HP Corporate Development where he led acquisition projects for HP's Software, Cloud, EG and PPS businesses. In this role, Griffith worked closely with senior HP executives to develop inorganic growth strategies, structure and negotiate transactions, and to help streamline overall integration of acquired companies.

Griffith spent more than a decade in the technology industry prior to HP, with a range of functional and technology leadership roles in the US and internationally. His experience includes technology investment banking, advising both blue-chip companies and high-growth startups at Merrill Lynch, as well as enterprise software professional services and consulting at i2 Technologies.

Griffith holds a Master of Business Administration from University of California, Los Angeles Anderson in addition to engineering degrees from Princeton University and Stanford University.