Director, Solutions Marketing,
Enterprise Security Products
Hewlett-Packard Company

---

Ryan Kalember is senior director of solutions marketing for Enterprise Security Products at HP, responsible for managing the company's enterprise security solutions portfolio. The portfolio includes market-leading products from ArcSight, an HP company, which serve as key components in the HP Security Intelligence and Risk Management platform. He also manages security integration across the HP Enterprise Security portfolio of vertical and horizontal security solutions.

Kalember previously managed the EnterpriseView suite of products at ArcSight, which extend the platform to monitor business risks such as unauthorized user activity, the use of cloud computing, or financial transactions. With more than 12 years of experience in a variety of roles in the United States and Europe, Kalember has an extensive background in the information security industry, including work with VeriSign and Guardent. Kalember also co-founded a company that worked with financial institutions and government agencies to create authentication and encryption algorithms and tools.

Kalember received his bachelor's degree from Stanford University, where he studied fault-tolerant computing systems and researched new types of cryptographic and authentication algorithms.
