

Executive Biography

Frank Mong

Vice President, Solutions
Enterprise Security Products
Hewlett-Packard Company

Frank Mong is vice president of Solutions within the HP Enterprise Security Products organization. In this role, he is responsible for directing product and solutions marketing to support the organization's security intelligence and risk management platform as well as driving the growth of Atalla's payment and data security business.

An industry veteran with nearly 20 years of networking, software and internet security experience, Mong joined HP from Silver Spring Networks, where he served as vice president of Business Development. Contributing to the company's leadership position in the delivery of smart energy networks, Mong was responsible for the development and growth of Silver Spring Networks' 80-member partner program and also played an integral role in raising venture capital funding.

Prior to Silver Spring Networks, Mong served as vice president of Marketing at Trend Micro, a Japan-based internet security provider. He has also previously served as a senior director of Product Marketing at Symantec, where he directly contributed to the growth of the company's billion dollar enterprise data protection business. Prior to that, Mong was a partner at Ignyte Technology, a network security consulting firm, which was successfully sold to SonicWALL in 2001.

Mong holds a Bachelor of Science in Electrical Engineering and Computer Engineering from the University of California, Davis.