

Intuitive, Stylish New HP Calculators Simplify Everyday Calculations

PALO ALTO, Calif., Jan. 8, 2009 – HP is making the day-to-day use of calculators even easier with the introduction today of the HP SmartCalc 300s, HP EasyCalc 100 and HP OfficeCalc 300.

These new calculators boast a convenient and intuitive user experience, continuing HP's tradition of technical innovation and product performance.

"HP's new calculators showcase our dedication to continually improve the everyday consumer and student learning experience with calculators," said Wing Kin Cheung, general manager, Calculator Division, HP. "Whether it's delivering calculator technology that allows students to input mathematical expressions the same way they would write it on paper or quick and elegant office calculating solutions to business professionals, HP is making it easy and fun for calculator users to get their answers quickly."

Easy calculations for the classroom, home or office

Delivering a logical and intuitive user experience, the HP SmartCalc 300s scientific calculator helps math and science students solve basic and advanced math problems with ease. The calculator's remarkable large, multi-pixel Textbook Format Display (TFD) allows students to see math expressions as they would appear on paper. Students can also use the intuitive navigation pad to move around within an expression to change it and watch the result. With 249 built-in functions and integrated energy-wise solar power, the HP SmartCalc 300s is the ideal tool for actively engaging students with trigonometry, statistics and other advanced mathematics.

Great for everyday calculations, the colorful and compact HP EasyCalc 100 is a cinch to carry and makes it easy to perform basic math functions whenever the need arises – in the classroom, home or office. Its 12-digit display, solar power with battery backup, automatic power off and slim profile make it an ideal on-the-go calculator. Small and easy to use, the HP EasyCalc 100 is a perfect fit for a young student's backpack or a businessperson's briefcase.

Meet your new office assistant – elegant and smart

A refined addition to any office desk or sales counter, the energy-efficient and elegantly designed HP OfficeCalc 300 boasts the instinctive "Check and Correct" function that allows users to edit any one of their last 105 inputs without having to re-key the entire expression. Customers can also save time with the calculator's built-in functions for common business calculations such as tax and percentages. With the easy-to-read, adjustable, 14-digit tilt screen display, dual
